About Asia House

Asia House is the Centre of Expertise on Asia.

We drive political and economic engagement between Europe and Asia through our programme of events, featuring thought leaders and opinion formers; through our policy and advisory services; and through our research activity. We also create greater cultural understanding between Europe and Asia through our Arts and Learning programme.

Asia House was founded in 1996 by the former diplomat Sir Peter Wakefield. Today, we are located in an eighteenth-century listed townhouse in Marylebone, London.

The following pages outline further information about what we do at Asia House, and how to engage with us.

At the heart of Asia trade and investment

Through our professional activities and our reputation for impartiality and objectivity, we have developed a comprehensive and influential network which ensures Asia House remains at the heart of the discourse on Asia. This enables us to provide unique insights to our members and create current and informed analysis products for the corporate world.

Business and Policy

Driving engagement: Events at Asia House

Asia House runs a comprehensive programme of events each year aimed at driving political and economic engagement between Europe and Asia. We invite senior officials, business leaders and analysts to give private briefings to corporate members on issues that matter to them, all given off-the-record to encourage free and frank discussion.

We organise major conferences on highly relevant themes aimed at moving the global debate on trade and investment forward. Speakers regularly include government ministers and senior business leaders.

Many Asia House events are part of wider series on current issues affecting global trade and investment. Current programmes include the 'Asia House Brexit Series' and our 'New Global Trade Order' series. In 2018 we launched the 'Asia House Middle East Programme.'

Policy, advisory and research services

As the Centre of Expertise on Asia, we are well placed to provide research and advisory services to corporates with interests in the region, or Asian businesses seeking to engage with Europe. Working to briefs provided by clients, we tailor bespoke products on specific issues, from analysis on individual markets to advisory activities.

Clients supported by Asia House's advisory and research services have included government departments, Big Four accountancy firms, global defence contractors, international banks, and aviation companies.

Corporate membership

Corporate members at Asia House benefit from a wide range of services aimed at supporting their activities, and to equip them with the knowledge to make informed decisions.

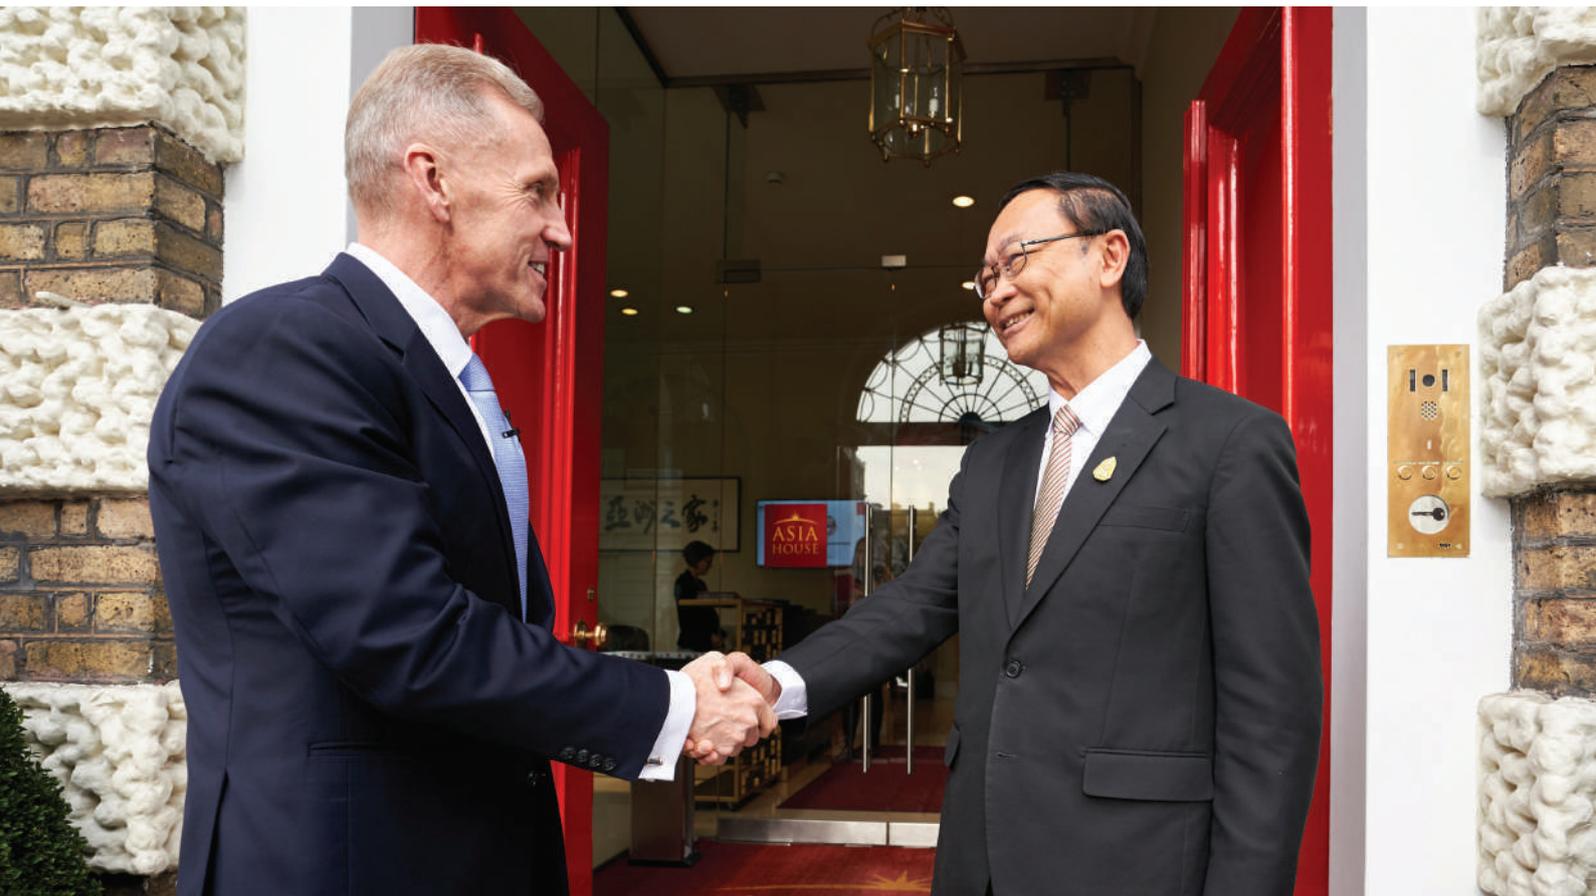

Corporate members gain access to exclusive Asia House private briefings, as well as our roundtables, conferences and speeches. We also provide ongoing research and advisory support to our corporate members, drawing on our inhouse expertise and network to assist in overcoming members' specific challenges.

Our unique and highly active network, developed thanks to our reputation for objectivity and integrity, includes thought leaders from governments, business, academia and the media.

Creating greater cultural understanding

Asia House supports a vibrant Arts and Learning Programme which is completely unique in the UK in presenting a pan-Asian cultural programme of its scope.

Through our programme of events on arts, culture and education, we act as a catalyst for the discovery of the diverse arts and cultures of Asia and the Asian diaspora, and serve as a bridge of understanding between the UK and Asia. The annual Asia House Bagri Foundation Literature Festival is the signature festival at Asia House.
